Laurent Bien Legbane, PhD

Global Chairman

CFBANQUE INVESTMENT

Chairman, Chartered Financial Investment

Laurent Bien Legbane is an international financial executive specialising in structured finance, strategic advisory, and cross-border capital mobilisation in support of economic development and investment growth across emerging markets.

As Global Chairman of CFBANQUE INVESTMENT, he provides overarching strategic leadership and governance oversight across the Group's activities. In this capacity, he defines the institution's long-term vision, drives its international expansion, and ensures alignment with global financial standards and best practices.

In parallel, he serves as Chairman of Chartered Financial Investment, the Group's dedicated investment and advisory platform. In this role, he oversees the development and execution of strategic initiatives related to capital mobilisation, corporate finance, and cross-border transactions, contributing to the positioning of the platform as a key facilitator of investment flows between international capital markets and African economies.

Based in London, he operates at the intersection of global financial markets and emerging economies, with a strong commitment to strengthening financial structuring capabilities and supporting sustainable economic development across Africa.

Professional Background

Prior to founding and leading his own institutions, Laurent Bien Legbane held senior roles within globally recognised organisations, where he developed extensive expertise in international investment structuring, strategic advisory, and risk management.

He served as Vice President within the Emerging Markets Investments division of Goldman Sachs, where he was involved in structuring investment opportunities and supporting capital deployment strategies across high-growth markets.

He also held the position of Associate Director — Risk for the Francophone region at McKinsey & Company, where he contributed to strategic advisory engagements focused on risk management, organisational transformation, and institutional development for both public and private sector clients.

These experiences enabled him to develop a strong understanding of complex financial environments and to advise senior stakeholders on strategic and operational matters across multiple jurisdictions.

Academic Background

Laurent Bien Legbane holds an international academic background combining advanced expertise in finance, management, and economic analysis.

He earned a PhD from Université Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne, reflecting a high level of academic achievement and specialisation in finance, economics, and global market dynamics.

He also holds a Master's degree in Finance from ESSEC Douala, where he developed a solid foundation in corporate finance and financial markets.

He further completed an MBA at HEC Montréal, strengthening his expertise in strategic management, governance, and executive leadership.

In addition, he obtained a Financial Engineering qualification from American University, providing him with advanced technical capabilities in financial modelling and the structuring of complex financial instruments.

This academic background underpins his ability to combine strategic insight with technical execution in high-level financial environments.

Leadership & Strategic Vision

Laurent Bien Legbane promotes a leadership approach grounded in strong governance, institutional discipline, and long-term value creation.

His strategic vision is built upon:

• the establishment of robust governance frameworks and accountability standards;

• the application of advanced financial engineering tailored to emerging market dynamics;

• a commitment to transparency and alignment with international standards;

• the development of sustainable investment strategies designed to generate long-term economic impact.

He views finance as a strategic tool for transformation, capable of supporting investment, driving economic growth, and fostering deeper integration of African markets into the global financial system.

Through his leadership, he aims to position CFBANQUE INVESTMENT as a trusted and forward-looking institution, capable of delivering high-value financial solutions and building strong international partnerships.
